Following are links to some of the websites and organizations that are working to promote peace and harmony in South Asia especially between India and Pakistan.

Pakistan-India Peoples' Forum For Peace and Democracy (PIPFPD)

The goal of PIPFD is to facilitate common people in both the countries to listen to voices that are different from the belligerent voices of the respective Governments. It is with the objective of asserting the sanity of the peace loving people of India and Pakistan that concerned citizens and groups in both the countries have come together to formulate strategies for promoting peace and strengthen democracy in the sub-continent.

IPFC is born from PIPFPD.

Friends without Borders

India Pakistan Peace

Coalition for Nuclear Disarmament and Peace (CNDP)

The Coalition for Nuclear Disarmament and Peace (CNDP) is India's national network of over 200 organisations, including grassroots groups, mass movements and advocacy organisations, as well as individuals. Formed in November 2000, CNDP demands that India and Pakistan roll back their nuclear weapons programmes.

South Asians against Nukes

An independent platform to raise awareness against the menace of military and civil nuclearisation in India and Pakistan.

South Asia Forum for Human Rights (SAFHR)

Human rights, peace and democracy are the main areas of concern of the South Asia Forum for Human Rights. SAFHR set up in 1990, is a regional public forum for the promotion of respect for universal values of human rights, the interdependence of rights and the indivisibility of rights.

Friends of South Asia (FOSA)

The basic mission of the "Friends of South Asia" is to achieve a peaceful, prosperous, and hate-free South Asia. The group works towards a demilitarized, nuclear-free South Asia; bringing together people with roots in various parts of South Asia, as well as other well-wishers of the region.

International South Asia Forum (INSAF)

The International South Asia Forum (INSAF) is a coalition of individuals and organizations dedicated to the promotion of peace and social justice in South Asia. We seek a peaceful resolution of all conflicts in the region, demilitarization, an end to the nuclear standoff between India and Pakistan, and the promotion of friendship among the people of the region.

Alliance for a Secular and Democratic South Asia

In response to the rising communalization of South Asian societies, the Alliance for a Secular and Democratic South Asia was formed in January 1993. The Alliance is made up of concerned individuals in the Boston area. It represents many South Asian countries as well as people of South Asian descent in the USA.

South Asian Network for Secularism and Democracy (SANSAD)

EKTA

EKTA is a South Asian progressive network that works to provide a platform for social change through art, dialogue, and education.

Association for Communal Harmony in Asia (ACHA)

ACHA is dedicated to promote peace in South Asia and harmony among South Asians everywhere they live. ACHA Board of Directors appreciates people's goodwill and support for this cause. Based in the state of Oregon in the United States of America, ACHA is a non-profit and non-political organization.
